Visiting Guatemala

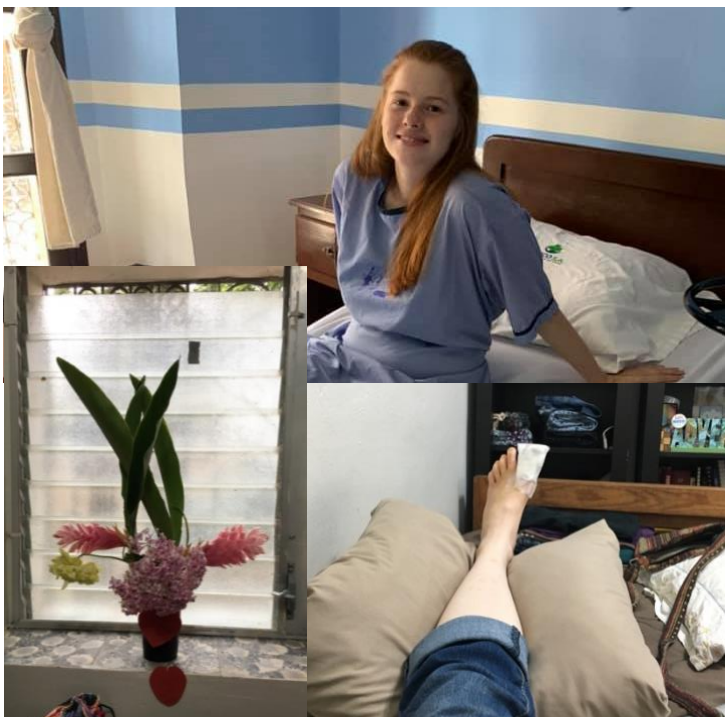

Because of how close Guatemala is to Honduras, my mom and I decided to take a trip for a couple days to visit the AIM team that had a few weeks before arrived at their field in Guatemala. After a seven-hour drive turned into a ten-hour drive because of road blockades, we finally arrived in Guatemala City. I loved getting to visit my friends and classmates and get to see them adapting and working on their field already.

My mom and I took the whole team for a much needed relaxing day-trip to Antigua, Guatemala (a nearby touristy town, and where my parents and I learned Spanish two years ago).

I enjoyed getting to see my friends again before it was time for me to go the field and start my mission apprenticeship in Arlington, TX.

Toe Drama

For the past year I've been having trouble with my toe. It had been hurting and not healing, and no one could figure out why. Last week we got an x-ray and found out the problem: a bone spur had been growing up from the top of the bone in my toe and pushing up into my nailbed. To fix this, part of my toe bone had to be surgically removed. This was a little scary, but it all went well and hopefully my toe will finally get better!

Looking Forward

The time has finally come! I am finally on the field! My teammates and I just moved to Arlington, TX on June 1st and will move into our apartment soon. I am so excited to begin working, learning, and serving for the next fourteen months! This coming month will be full of learning curves and many blessings!

Verse of the Month

"The Lord had said to Abram, 'Go from your country, your people and your father's household to the land I will show you.'"

Genesis 12:1

Prayer Request

Team Dynamics

As y'all well know, our team and field went through a lot of changes in the past two months. These changes were unexpected by everyone but God, so will you keep us in your prayer that we have patience through stressful times and peace through chaotic times.

Support

Please continue to pray that my team and I can trust in God's provision and have enough support to pay for all of the expenses involved with living in Arlington.

Residence

Our apartment wasn't ready for people to move into it yet when we arrived, so please be praying that we can have a place ready soon.

Saying Goodbye, Saying Hello

This past month with in Honduras was much needed for my physical and spiritual health. I was so encouraged by how much the church in Corquín has grown in the past year. I loved meeting the new Christians that started coming before I left and visiting with the members who have been there since the beginning.

I loved the opportunity I got to teach some of the kids' classes while being back in May. I had missed teaching them while I was in Lubbock in the training portion of the AIM program.

It was sad to leave, and they threw me a little going away party. I'll miss Honduras a lot.

Getting to the airport was difficult because throughout the whole country people have been protesting and blockading the roads especially around large cities. So, to get to the airport safely and on time, we had to leave at about 2:45am to get into the city before they started the protests that day. But we made it and now I am in Arlington, TX. I am so excited to get started and moved in! We got to meet our coordinators, Mike and Mayra Bingham, and the congregation that we will be working with, Westwood Church of Christ.

We had our first Sunday with the church on June 2, and it is my goal to learn everyone's name. Everyone is so welcoming to my team (Olivia and Ash) and me.

Thank you

Thanks so much for all of your prayers and support! These past few months have been a rollercoaster of changes, but God is so faithful and good. I am so grateful for everyone who has been praying or supporting me financially this whole time. Thank you, also, to those who will continue to support me on the field!
